*'Somewhere in England',
Sunday 26 November 1944*

Dear Frank,

I have just been thumbing through my little black books, and note that your birthday, is only a few days away. I am grieved at my inability to be present, so I could profit by the traditional bad gambling luck that comes with a birthday. How about you writing, and giving me a blow by blow description of your party? After all, you know, this is the first of your birthdays I've missed, for quite a while. I have been given to understand, that you are allergic to writing, however, I figured you might stretch a point this time.

For news of the latest current events, with me, I refer you to my letter to Alice and the 'Gang'!

Give the individual members of your family, a love; for me; and write when you have the time, and the inclination,

Your G.I. brother-in-law,

Johnny
